This interdisciplinary minor is offered jointly by the Schar School of Policy and Government (<http://catalog.gmu.edu/colleges-schools/policy-government/>) and the Department of Communication (<http://catalog.gmu.edu/colleges-schools/humanities-social-sciences/communication/>).

Political communication explores the interaction among members of the public, the media, advocacy groups, and politicians in a democratic society. This minor uses a diverse approach to questions of how mass and interpersonal communication influence democratic functioning, including:

1. how political actors use strategic messaging to persuade and mobilize the public;
2. how citizens make sense of these messages and their impact on engagement, deliberation, efficacy, knowledge, and participation;
3. the role of the mass media in facilitating or hindering this relationship.

Political communication includes explicitly political activities like voting and political campaigns. It also encompasses any issue of public debate or deliberation, including culture and social movements.

Admissions & Policies

Admissions

This minor is available to all Mason undergraduate students with the exception of communication majors pursuing a concentration in political communication.
